

Rooted in the Stories of Christ

This series of lessons is all about observing the qualities that Jesus exhibited in his encounters with people, and learning to develop these qualities in our own lives. In “The Stories of Christ,” students will examine memorable encounters Jesus had with the people around him. The people in these stories were like us. They experienced the hurt of loss, of finger pointing and judgment, of being overlooked, made fun of and marginalized. Jesus, on the other hand, met their need with compassion. He offered them availability, forgiveness and humility. We can truly say that he practiced what he preached.

In “The Stories of Christ,” students encounter the available, forgiving, humble Jesus who cares for them throughout the ups and downs of life. Through the example of Jesus students are also reminded about their need for self-transformation to be more like him. The lessons in this series remind students that they can be transformed to become more like Christ, and encourages them to identify ways for practicing Christ-like behaviour in their everyday lives.
